CHELSEA SAVINGS BANK WORK

Reinforced Concrete Floor will be Poured Today, Forms being Ready—After that Hardens Stonework will proceed—Excavating for State Hospital Building.

For the past few days workmen have been engaged in putting in the forms for the reinforced concrete floor of the new Chelsea Savings bank, corner of Main and Cliff streets. Contractor Williams stated Tuesday that the forms are all ready and the concrete will be poured today. The base course of stonework has been set, but no more stonework will be done until the concrete sets and hardens so that the floor can be used. The stone for the handsome building has all been cut and is ready to be shipped here. The floor will not be ready for the stonework to be continued for two weeks, but as soon as it is rapid progress will be noted on the job. The accompanying view gives an idea of the imposing building which will be erected, making a wonderful change at that corner and a grand improvement to the city. A full description of the building has been previously given.

Contractor Williams has just started work on a $20,000 residence for Mr. Whitman at Diamond Hill, R. I. This will not be completed for a number of months.

State Hospital Work.

Excavating, Thomas Dodd this week started the digging of the cellar for the south ward C building at the Norwich state hospital. The contractors are getting their materials on the grounds and it is the idea to carry along the work on the several buildings at the same time. The cellar is about half done. Twenty men being at work there now.

At the Shannon, building annex the workmen are centering their attention with a view to getting the two stories ready by the first of the month. The plasterers have been through them, while the doorways and display windows are now being constructed.

Thames Specialties Co. Mill.

Although operations have been prosecuted at the site of the new paper mill in Uxbridge every day when the weather permitted, a decided impetus has been given to the work this week in every department by the Bigelow-Harriman construction company. Horatio Bigelow and Mr. Harriman of the company were at the plant on Monday and went over all the work with the new superintendent of construction, Mr. McCullum, of Boston, who arrived in the afternoon to take charge.

The formation of the new dam is to be rushed right along now, additional timber forms being placed for the upper layers of the concrete wing and a commencement made on the forms for the main part of the dam. The leakage of water here has been a constant source of trouble and expense, but this difficulty has now, it is believed, been overcome and the concrete work can go forward.

Inside the main building a short time will elapse before a commencement can be made in clearing the ground floor and making ready to install the first of the big machines. The excavation of the new cellar has been made on a new mixer has been set up. The boiler and engine have been moved and are ready for setting, the connecting iron work being unloaded from the V. railroad during the past few days.

The T. A. Scott company of New London sent up a powerful dredge with four mud screws on Monday and commenced operations digging on the mud flats south and east of the mill building, where some material had piled into the river during the first period of the work of sinking concrete piles. According to current report, the big mill will be sufficiently advanced to allow a part to be started some time next fall.

It became known with the filing in court at New York Tuesday of the report of the committee appointed to inquire into the sanity of Herbert Jerome Denison, the magician formerly of Norwich, that the supposedly deranged man had at one of the hearings identified as his own the revolver found in the woods near where Robert Lomas and Arthur Shibley, two six-year-old boys co-accused, were shot last January.

Denison did not admit the shooting, but in identifying the revolver at the hearing declared that he had not seen the weapon since he "filled the trees full of bullets up in Westport, Conn."

The commission's report held that Denison undoubtedly was insane and unable to advise with his counsel as to the conduct or preparation of his trial. Commenting upon the transfer of Denison from the Tombs to Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane probably will be signed today. The commissioners are unanimous in their opinion that Denison was responsible for the death of the Lomas and Shibley boys.

HOGAN'S MANLINESS.

Famous Athlete Was Also a Leader in All That Made for Good—Influence Over Weak Classmates.

Concerning James J. Hogan, a Torrington correspondent writes:

In the midst of all the honors that came to "Captain Jim" he was still the modest, unassuming Torrington boy with a loyalty to his home town and the same devotion to his parents and to the St. Francis T. A. and B. society and its principles that characterized his boyhood and early manhood.

He was the second president of the Tabs and had always retained his membership. Before leaving to pursue his education he was for a time county director of the C. T. A. U. To his influence more than to that of any one man has been due the success of the Torrington team in paying off the mortgage on their clubhouse. For when in Torrington two years ago next June it was Jim Hogan who, as a member of the Irish-American Athletic club of New York city, brought up the bunch of the world's greatest athletes to participate in the events and produced a programme which yielded nearly enough money to pay off the debt.

The question has been asked whether his condition was the result of the strain of his college athletic career. On the contrary, the theory generally accepted by those who knew him best in his later life was that it was due to be attributed to the lack of exercise since leaving the gridiron and his close attention to study work.

The following story illustrating Hogan's character and influence in college days has an important bearing on the events of the last few weeks. One of his classmates, the son of a wealthy New York merchant, started his college course with a reckless disregard of all the proprieties, plunging into excesses which bid fair to bring a speedy termination to his prospects as a student and leave him a moral wreck. His one redeeming trait was an intense admiration for Hogan. The father, recognizing this fact, talked with him to use his influence to correct the wayward tendencies of the boy.

As a result he was inspired to abandon the evil associations and graduated with a good record as a student and as a man.

Is it an open secret that the expenses of the visits of at least one of the New York experts to Hogan's bedside have been provided for by this father as an expression of gratitude and that everything that wealth could do to save the life of the boy's classmate has been freely offered.
